THIS week's GAZETTE, which will be printed at noon to-day, expressly for the foreign mail by the U.S.

Flagship Charleston, contains: A full biographical sketch of King Kalakaua, illustrated with a portrait. A full account of the funeral of the late King, and of the procession to the Mausoleum, where the remains have been deposited.

This is illustrated with a picture of Iolani Palace, where the funeral services took place.

A full list of all the coffins deposited in the Mausoleum. In it will also be found the resolutions of the Chamber of Commerce, and the various benevolent, feather cloak. and other societies.

Also the time table of the Oceanic mail steamers between Honolulu and San Francisco for the year 1891.

This number of the GAZETTE offers the best medium to be had for conveying full accounts of the late stirring news, and will serve instead of letters to friends at cies, and also at the office of publication, 46 Merchant street, in wrappers, and by the dozen.

THE GOVERNMENT.

A question has arisen as to whether the present Ministers sur vive the King, by whom they were appointed, or whether their term of office terminated with his death. The only law on which the decision Taylor. His Lordship the Bishop of rests is Article 41 of the Constitution, which read as follow:

Article 41. The Cabinet shall consist of the Minister of Foreign Affairs, the Minister of the Interior, the Minister of Finance and the Attorney-General, and they shall be His Majesty's special advisers in the executive affairs of the Kingdom; and they shall be ex officio members of His Majesty's Privy Council of State. They shall be appointed and act of the King shall have any effect unless it be countersigned by a member of the Cabinet, who by that signature land, H. R. H. Princess Poomaikelani, makes himself responsible.

If no decision can be reached, except by reference to the Judges of the Supreme Court, this should be done at once. They alone are Excellencies John A. Cummins, Premier the last resort to settle the meaning of the Constitution. While a change of Government at this time might prove a misfortune, the question should be set at rest by a judicial decision.

It appears according to Postmaster Van Cott's annual report that York Post Office during 1890, 343,-497,329 pieces of mail matter. The total number of pieces of mail mattotal number of pieces of mail matter of all kinds handled during the year was 1,024,198,721.

LAST HONORS.

An Imposing Funeral Procession.

(February 15) Yesterday morning the sun dawned upon as bright and beautiful a day as that King of Light ever shown upon. No more auspicious morning could have been wished. The elements seemed to sympathize with the one universal de-pay the last sad rites to Hawaii's departed Sovereign. Early in the morning Honolulu put on an aspect of quiet, mournful activity for which the occasion called. The streets along the route of the procession began to be filled long before the procession was to leave the Palace.

The following is the form of invitation issued by the Vice-Chamberlain, James W. Robertson:

> IOLANI PALACE, February 5th, 1891. The Religious Services on the occa sion of the Funeral of His Late Majesty Kalakaua, Will take place at Iolani Palace, on Sunday, the 15th instant, at 11 o'clock Your Obedient Servant, JAMES W. ROBERTSON, Vice-Chamberlain.

No one was admitted to the Palace who had not received an invitation nor possessed the following permit of admit-

To the Funeral Services of His Late Majesty Kalakaua, To be held at Iolani Palace, on Sunday, the 15th February, 1891.

At 10 A. M., those invited to attend the furneral services held at Iolani Palace, began to assemble in the Throne Room, where the casket rested upon a pall covered by a large cloak of yellow feathers, as was also the lower portion of the casket. At the head of the casket were held four kahilis-two small, ones of yellow feathers and two larger ones of white feathers surmounted by black caps. On either side were kahilis, large and small, held by uniformed guards, each wearing a Floral Decorations. Around the foot of the casket were placed in great profusion some of the kingdom's choicest and most beautiful flowers, almost too numerous to mention. Conspicuous among the floral tributes were a large kahili made of marigolds; a harp made of roses; another, a most beautiful one, was formed of tuberoses with two white doves, with partly spread wings, on the upper corners. A combination of many flowers was worked into a large pillow with the initials "K. K.;" a crown, a loyal tribute, was arranged It can be had at the news agen-ies and also at the office of puba kahili composed of ferns and white roses added to the beauty of the collection, with a beautiful cape made from various flowers. Besides these there were thousands of fragrant flowers woven into many handsome bouquets of various shapes and designs, a hack load of flowers having preceded the procession to the Mausoleum.

Services in the Throne Room. At 11 'o'clock the services in the Throne room commenced with a funeral march, "In Memoriam," by Mr. Wray Honolulu solemnly read in Hawaiian the sentences beginning, "I am the resurrection," etc. The choir from St. Andrew's Cathedral sang the hymn, "When our heads are bowed with woe." The chant, composed for the occasion by Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani, of psalm 90— Domine Refugium (The Lord is our Refuge, etc.), was sung by the combined choirs. The choir then sang, 'Blest were they who walked in love,' followed by a reading lesson-1st of

Her Majesty Queen Liliuokalani, the Hon. John O. Dominis, Prince Consort, and Hon. A. S. Cleghorn, were the chief mourners by the head of the casket. At the foot of the casket sat the Ministers of the Hawaiian Kingdom, their and Minister of Foreign Affairs, C. N. Spencer, Minister of the Interior, Godfrey Brown, Minister of Finance, A. P.

A few moments later the Masons marched in, and a very impressive funeral service was performed. Mr. John Phillips as Master read the sermon, after the Masons had formed around the coffin. Then Mr. David Dayton went on with the service. the Masons saying the responses, after which the brothers moved in procession round the body, each depositing a sprig of evergreen on the coffin. The grand honors were given three times. The chaplain, Rev. Alex. Mackintosh, offered up the prayer in a most touching manner. He pronounced the benediction, the service ending by the singing of the funeral dirge, "Solemn strikes the fun'ral chime." Mr. Wray Taylor also presided at the organ for the Masonic service, which was most impressive

Along the Way.

The procession was one of great length, aking one hour and fifteen minutes to pass a given point, and many of the different delegations marched four and five abreast, while a great number of the carriages drove by twos. The procession was orderly, unbroken and proceeded with an evenness that bespoke well of discipline of the different companies and delegations. The route of the procession was crowded by a continuous throng of people, who viewed it trom sidewalks, verandas, windows, balconies and roofs. At no other time during the past history of Hawaii has been or is likely to be for some time in the future, such a large cosmopolitan concourse of people assembled in Honolulu. Thus has been the last look of the public upon the remains of Kalaknua. They rest in quiet with a long line of royal ancestors gone to join the vast majority. Hawaii has seen one of her most illustrious sovereigns die on a foreign shore, his remains suddenly brought home at a time when her people were preparing for a festal event, all of which preparations were soon changed into deep mourning. The death of Kalakana will go down in the histsry of Hawaii, marking the end of an epoch that during his seventeen years' reign has been a prosperous one.

Farewell Salutes.

From the time the funeral cortege left the Palace, minute guns were fired from the top of Punchbowl and from the two American men-of-war-Charleston and Mohican. Bells were mournfully tolling throughout the city and bonfires were burning from Punchbowl, ad ing an imit slowly wended its way to the Mauso-The Casket.

Singing of Dirges at the Palace.

Not the least among the attractions to the Palace during the past two weeks was the singing by the native choirs in the evenings, often till after midnight. The songs were mostly recent composi-tions in honor of the late King, and were sung either by a full choir of twenty or After the Anglican service the choir nd clergy and others, in fact all but the > " Mourn ye sons of Hawaii, Sad news to you we bring, No more you'll gaze with loving eye, Upon your generous King." The refrain at the end of each verse King Kalakana's no more," gave it most melancholy finale. Another dirge described the sorrow spread over the land at the appearance of the Charleston draped in mourning, the chorus to which touched every heart: " His voice is hushed,

His spirit fled, Our royal father, King no more." The last line, in particular, was sung with most touching pathos. Several of these dirges were composed by those singing them, the last referred to having been by Mrs. Holt. Others are ascribed to the Queen. It is noteworthy that they take the place of the senseless wailing which was heard after the deaths of the earlier chiefs and kings, which is seldom heard now-a-days in the city.

K. of P. Uniform Rank.

The P. H., Brook's Division No. 1, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, appeared to great advantage in their magnificent new uniforms; theirs were a great contrast to the sombre color adjacent and along the line. The bright red plumes on their white helmets; the silver braid on the shoulder straps; the red belt, with silver hangings and sword tended to relieve the monotony of the dark colors to the eye. The Division has been in existence only a few months; they are all, with the exception of two, members of Mystic Lodge No. 2, Knights of Pythias.

Unlike a military company, all the members wear shoulder strips, that to the eye of a military man, each member of the division appears like an officer. The full dress uniform, which the division appeared in, consists of the following: White helmet with nickle chain chin strap, surmounted with red fountain plume; on front of helmet is a shield in red with silver bullion braid border, and in center of same a calla lily device in silver bullion. The coat is the regular military single-breasted frock, made from black broadcloth. A row of nine white metal buttons fastens the coat in front; these buttons have on the border raised letters the name of the order, also a calla lily; besides these buttons two appear at the waist and two on the coat tails. The shoulder straps worn by each individual is made up like the shield on the helmets, with the exception that they are rectangle in shape. The pantaloons are ordinary black cloth tronsers. Encircling the waist is a red enameled leather belt, with open pressiveness to the solemn procession as calla-lily hangers, attached to which are three chains in white metal; the buckle is made of the same metal, and bears > Hanging from the belt in the rear the atigue cap was worn, which added to the beauty of the outfit; it is of regular across the front above the peak, above that the figure "1," surrounded by calla-lilies. The top of the cap, which is shown when hanging, has a blue back-

On a beautiful lawn at the entrance of Nuuanu Valley, overlooking this city, Royal Mausoleum, erected by the Hawaiian Government, as the resting place Hawaii and a few of their greatest benefactors. building is a vault, constructed mainly "The Kamehameha Tomb." It was built some six or eight years ago, as it became necessary to provide some other place for the increasing number of coffins which had nearly filled the main building. A portion of the coffins have been transferred to this large and spacious tomb, thus relieving the main building, so that space is now provided for all the requirements of many years to come. Prior to the transfer of the remains of the kings to the present mausoleum, they were kept in a temporary mausoleum in the Palace yard. In bold contrast with that rude structure, it is a credit to the nation that such a building has been erected for the purpose, and it will ever remain an ornament to the city, as long as it stands. Few people are aware how many coffins are deposited here. Including that of our late King Kalakaua, they number fifty. The following may not be a complete list of all whose remains are in the Royal Mausoleum, as the information has been obtained from several sources, nor have the dates when they died been ascertained The body or bones of Kamehameha the Great are said to have been deposited in the caves near Kealakeakua Bay, where those of other royal chiefs were laid; but as they have never been recog-nized, they still remain where first deposited.
